MUSSOLINI PRISONER IN ITALY, REPORT

Meandering Along the Main Stem By WASH FAYETTE

A lot of people have a great many beautiful thoughts, and I am glad this woman, who does not wish her name mentioned, has handed me this one which I am giving to you just as she has written it:

"Why can't we all, as we gaze skyward when we hear the drone of an airplane motor, instead of wondering if the pilot is going to clip our housetops or how high he is flying, offer a little prayer for his safety?"

"We know the man who is guiding the plane and all who are on the plane, are loved by dear ones down here.

"It needn't be a long drawn out, eloquent prayer; a tiny one would help. 'God bless thee and keep thee' is all one need say. What do you think?"

I think it is a wonderful idea and I hope that many, many persons here and elsewhere will say the little prayer with each passing plane, for every man at the helm is flying for freedom—for God and country, and for every one of us, so why not say a little prayer for him!

If you don't believe this is an "off year" for wheat, take the case of Roy Snyder, of the Edgefield community, who has two threshing outfits and has not pulled either outfit out for threshing this year.

It is the first time in 35 years that Roy has not operated at least one threshing outfit throughout the season.

However, Roy is not idle. He is in charge of the mechanical department of the Jeffersonville Auto Company, and being an expert mechanic, has been doing notable work in looking after farm tractors and repair of other farm equipment, often working far into the night to get vital farm equipment in condition for use.

Like the overworked blacksmiths last spring, Roy has taken his place among the men in his community in aiding the farmer, so that regardless of the fact that his threshing outfits are idle due to lack of wheat to thresh, he is doing his part, and then some, in the war effort toward helping feed the nation.

When painters spread a new layer of red paint over the rear portion of the building occupied by the Meriweather Motor Co. on Market Street, Monday, they covered up an old sign that still showed plainly on the side of the building.

This sign read:

"Wilson Bachert, carriage maker," and the sign was placed there before the days of the automobile, or some 40 years ago when Bachert was the leading carriage-maker of the city.

I knew Wilson very well, as a great many of you folks did, and know that his inherent honesty was carried into the carriages he made, and that the lasting qualities of his product attested to the superior quality of materials and workmanship employed.

State Chairman Under Fire Again as Party Leaders Seek To Oust Him

(By The Associated Press)

State Democratic Chairman Darrel S. Jones found himself under fire again today as prominent party members continued their quest for an answer to the federal patronage puzzle.

Joseph M. Sullivan, a Democratic state central committeeman, said he had asked Chairman Al Horstman to call an immediate meeting of the committee to consider whether to dismiss Jones.

State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, who has accused Jones of failing to produce federal jobs for the party's faithful in Ohio, said he planned a gathering next month to discuss the patronage picture.

Sullivan indicated his request.

NEW CAR TIRE QUOTA FOR AUGUST IS CUT

Used or Recapped Tire Will Have To Take Place

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP)—The Office of Price Administration announced today the quota of new passenger car tires for rationing in August will be 829,000 compared with 1,061,261 in July and the smallest quota since April.

Because of the reduced quota, OPA said, some drivers who are eligible for new tires may find it necessary to accept used or recapped tires.

The quota for grade three tires (used and recapped castings) was set at 644,000 for August compared with 414,931 in July. The quota includes so called "emergency tires," suitable only for spares or very limited driving.

8 Americans Indicted For Axis Broadcasting

Rep. Clare Boothe Peaved When Column Discarded

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP)—Eight Americans, including two women, who have broadcast regularly from Germany and Italy in behalf of the Axis war effort, were indicted today for treason and Attorney General Biddle said they would be brought to trial when caught.

The indictments, involving a charge which carries the death penalty, were returned before Federal District Judge James W. Morris in the District of Columbia as the culmination of many months of preparation by the Justice Department.

The indictments are similar, each alleging that the defendant named aided this country's enemies by repeated broadcasts designed "to persuade citizens of the United States to decline to support the United States in the conduct of the war."

Seven of those charged have been broadcasting from Germany, one from Italy. Six are native Americans, the other two are naturalized Americans of German birth.

The defendants, with a summary of their backgrounds as outlined by the Justice Department, are:

Ezra Pound, 57, a native of Hailey, Ida., educated in the east and a former resident of New York City; a poet and writer who

Fall Of Mussolini Expected To Lead To Peace For Italy

(By The Associated Press)

From around the world today came speculation and assertion that the exit of Benito Mussolini as premier of Italy had spelled out the prelude of a separate peace for Germany's Axis partner.

In capital after capital the reaction, although frequently only semi-official, was the same. It was that a tottering Italy had moved one step nearer to an exit from the war, whether through early armistice or easier capitulation to marching Allied armies.

Some of the reaction follows:

London: There was quick unofficial speculation that, since Italy had moved toward fulfillment of the Allies' initial condition of surrender, the British and American governments soon might present terms for "honorable capitulation" to King Vittorio Emanuele and Marshal Pietro Badoglio. At the same time, however, there was evidence of an attitude not to relax and wait for Italy to quit, but rather to "pour it on" for a smash finish.

Washington: Despite initial official silence, there was wide speculation that in choosing Marshal Badoglio to head the military government, the king had more than nodded at the Roosevelt-Churchill invitation to the Italian people to rid themselves of their Fascist government.

ment. Since Badoglio is a Royalist and anti-Fascist, it was regarded in many quarters that his appointment might well be followed by dissolution of the Fascist party and a bid for separate peace.

Secretary Hull said today that the very timely and appropriate ending of Premier Mussolini's rule in Italy is the first major step in the early and complete destruction and eradication of Fascism.

The state department head, making the first official American comment on the displacement of the Italian dictator, told a press conference that the Allies were fighting like the devil.

Hull indicated no change in the

WAR MATERIAL MADE BY OHIO CONVICTS

Expansion of Production Is Being Planned

COLUMBUS, July 26.—(AP)—Four representatives of the State Welfare Department conferred today at Jackson, Mich., with the prison section of the War Production Board about possible expansion of Ohio's prison production facilities.

Herber R. Mooney, Ohio Welfare Director, said nearly all available manpower in Ohio's three penal institutions for males was busy in production of war goods or in agricultural production for state institutions.

Last year Ohio's penal system led all other states in prison produced goods for the army and navy and in the increase of agricultural products, Mooney said. The increase was $820,799, or eight per cent of the nation-wide figure.

THIRD OF FSA DEBTS PAID OFF BY OHIOANS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 26.—(AP)—Ohioans liquidated nearly one third of their indebtedness to the farm security administration during the last year, P. G. Beck, regional FSA director reported. He said collections during the year ended last June 30 totaled $2,015,157 on $7,650,072 owned by Buckeye farmers.

MONEY POWERS HIT BY WALLACE

Detroit Speech Pooh-poohed By Republicans as Mere Cover-up for Failures

(By JACK BELL)

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP)—Vice President Wallace's blistering indictment of "isolationists" and "American Fascists" provoked a Republican charge today that he was attempting to "take the public mind off the embarrassing messes of the administration" on the home front.

In what was regarded as a significant speech at a Detroit mass meeting yesterday, Wallace charged that powerful groups "hope to take advantage of the president's concentration on the war effort to destroy everything he has accomplished on the domestic front over the last ten years."

The vice president said that some call these groups "isolationists," others call them "reactionaries" and still others, seeing them following in European footsteps, call them American Fascists.

He defined them as "small but powerful groups which put money and power first and people last."

Senator Nye (R-ND) told reporters it seemed clear to him that Wallace was attempting to shape the vital issue of the next presidential campaign between so-called interventionists and isolationists.

"Such an issue would at least let the administration take the public mind away from the embarrassing messes the administration has left in its path during these late years," Nye declared. "But as one non-interventionist, I would be quite willing to go to bat on what Wallace called the isolationist front."

"The day of reckoning is close at hand for Wallace and the whole administration," the North Dakota senator continued.

"It isn't going to help their cause merely to recite how the peons of South America love

Unrest In Balkans Indication Of Axis Influence Collapse

By FRANK O'BRIEN

ISTANBUL, July 25.—(Delayed)—(AP)—Signs have begun to appear in the Balkans indicating the possibility of a breakdown in the Axis structure there, with Hungary and Bulgaria showing the most symptoms of nervousness.

Premier Bogdan Philov of Bulgaria has issued a decree making all Bulgarians over the age of 16 subject to "state premier laws," indicating that the government believes much of the sabotage and pro-Russian activity in the country is the work of youths in schools and universities.

Another decree forbids Bulgarians to leave their homes or drive their cars during an air raid alert under penalty of being fired upon without question.

Travelers from Bulgaria report a general state of unrest and tension there, and predict that a series of swift Allied successes in the Mediterranean might cause a revolt against the Bulgarian alliance with the Axis.

Travelers from Hungary say that the same condition prevails in that satellite country.

Surprises, perhaps swift collapse of the Axis grip on southeastern Europe, may be in the offing.

FASCISTS IN DANGER

BERN, Switzerland, July 26.—(AP)—An unconfirmed report reaching Bern from Italy said the birthplace of Fascism in Milan had been burned along with the building of the Fascist newspaper, Il Popolo D'Italia, there.

Italian commissioners of public safety at Chiasso and other frontier cities were reported ordered by military authorities to remove all Fascist insignia. Travelers from Italy also were ordered to take off party buttons.

ALL-TIME RECORD SET FOR CHICKS THIS YEAR

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP)—The Agricultural Department said today young chickens raised on farms in 1943 reached an all-time peak estimated at 925,625,000 birds.

This was 16 per cent larger than the previous high of last year and 36 per cent above the 1932-41 average.

Benito Mussolini was reported the captive of a new Italian government today following the crash of his 21 year dictatorship.

Reuters, British news agency, said in a dispatch from Sweden that the fallen Mussolini had been captured while trying to escape from Italy to Germany. There was no immediate confirmation, but other dispatches from Switzerland said it was reported other leaders and cabinet members also were under arrest.

Martial law was proclaimed throughout Italy as the new regime took over, but dispatches from Switzerland said the people apparently were accepting the sensational developments with comparative calm.

Telephone communication between Switzerland and Italy had been reopened and railway traffic was moving smoothly, it was said.

Previously there had been hints of disorder.

Italians milled in the streets of Milan, Turin and other cities shouting "Down with Hitler," "Out with the Germans," and "We want peace," said roundabout reports received in Stockholm, and an Italian political source in London declared Italy would be out of the war in a week.

Hints of widespread turmoil within the Italian kingdom, hard driven by Allied armies in Sicily and severely punished by Allied air bombings, came from the Rome radio today—hints that were contained in a proclamation by the new Italian premier, Marshal Pietro Badoglio, ordering demonstrations to be put down with an iron hand by the military.

A royal proclamation by King Vittorio Emanuele over the Rome station Sunday night announced that Mussolini, the former street rowdy who leagued with Hitler and led his unwilling country into war against the Allies, had resigned and that the monarch was assuming command of all armed forces of the country.

There followed these swift developments:

1. Marshal Badoglio, former chief of staff, took over the reins at the behest of the diminutive king, and announced the "war continues."

2. A Berlin broadcast said he had named Baron Raffaele Guariglia, Italian ambassador to Turkey and former ambassador to

FOUR DIE IN FIRE IN ALLIANCE HOME

Mother and Three of Eight Children Perish

ALLIANCE, July 26.—(AP)—Mrs. Jack Baughman, mother of eight and expecting a ninth, perished with three of her children today in a fire which destroyed the family's home at the edge of the city.

The four victims were asleep on the second floor of their home where a passerby discovered a blaze. Fatally burned with the mother were Frances, 3½; Jackie, 8, and Mary, 2.

Two children, Eileen, 17, and Shirley, 5, were routed from their first floor sleeping room by the passerby who first noticed the fire. Three other children were visiting in Canton.

The children's father was at work in a war plant at the time of the blaze.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Downfall of Mussolini Sensation But No Surprise; Surrender of Italy Looms

So at long last the Big Voice with the feet of clay has toppled from the pedestal which he hewed for himself back in those trying days after the last World War when the people of Italy and other European countries were ready to accept any attractive political nostrum in an effort to cure their ills.

Mussolini's downfall is a sensation but not a surprise. No man with a soul so small that it would rattle in a peanut-shell, and inflamed with such short-sightedness as inspired his evil manner of entrance into the present war, could hope to survive.

The self-styled Duce, although possessing many accomplishments, never has been a big man. His chief assets have been a striking personality and the greatest gift of showmanship since Barnum. He is one of history's notorious fakers.

The circumstances of the dictator's collapse are such as to support the belief that Italy is preparing to jettison fascism and make overtures to the Allies for peace. The fact that the new military regime under Badoglio says the war will continue doesn't necessarily mean that surrender isn't contemplated.

This method of approach is calculated to save face and provide a possible bargaining point. Also the Italian government may have to proceed cautiously so as to avoid a display of irresponsible vindictiveness by Hitler.

However, whether Italy surrenders voluntarily in the near future or tries to battle on, her race is all but run. She can't hold out for long.

With the unhappy country in a state of near collapse, the great question is what the effect will be on other nations, especially Germany. There can be no doubt that the moral reaction will be far reaching. It cannot help but be a tremendous shock to the morale of the other Axis countries, and it will draw the neutrals closer to the Allies.

From a military standpoint Hitler presumably discounted the loss of Italy some time ago. He had squeezed all the juice he could out of that turnip when North Africa slipped away from him. However, if and when the Allies have taken over Italy it will provide a convenient base for possible operations in the Balkans, and that's something for the Fuehrer to worry about.

The repercussions amongst Hitler's Balkan satellites is likely to be bad for him. Already there is disaffection in Rumania, Bulgaria and Hungary, and the Italian debacle inevitably must strengthen the revolt against the Reich. In the case of Bulgaria it should not be overlooked that King Boris is the son-in-law of King Victor Emmanuel, and the Bulgarian ruler's views are likely to be heavily influenced by the Italian Monarch, and the position of Italy.

Equally to the point is the fact that most of the Axis troops now in the Balkans are Italian. So are those in the strategic Dodecanese Islands in the Aegean Sea. Surrender of Italy and withdrawal of her forces from these zones certainly would draw the bung in Hitler's Balkan barrel.

Naturally a breach in the Fuehrer's Balkan defenses would have an immediate and powerful effect on his position in Russia. As I have pointed out before, it would create a great threat to the right wing of his vast battle-front against which the Reds are flinging themselves with fresh fury.

for "a meeting at once" was made after he was informed of Ferguson's pending "rump" caucus.

The Springfield Democratic leader said he telegraphed his plea to Horstman yesterday, asserting he could "see no advantage in Ferguson's meeting" since only the state central committee holds the power of "hiring and firing" a state chairman.

"I hold no brief for Jones," he added. "I took my stand against him 15 days after he was appointed. . . . If he is to be removed or retained, I think it should be done in a perfectly regular manner and not by any high pressure methods."

At Dayton, Horstman said he did not receive Sullivan's message last night, but added there probably would be no meeting of the central committee until its regular assembly in about 30 days.

Ferguson's session was scheduled tentatively for early August, and some persons said a showdown between the auditor and Jones could be expected.

Ferguson said he would ask national committee members Charles Sawyer and Mildred Jas-

AUTO THIEVES ARE CAPTURED IN TEN MINUTES

Trio Had Been in Trouble In Indiana and Two Are on Parole

Within 10 minutes after three persons had stolen Prosecutor John B. Hill's automobile, about 11 P. M., Sunday night, the trio had been rounded up by the police a few miles from this city, and were being brought back here to face charges of auto theft.

The three are: Harry Howe, 31, Thomas Martin Cartright, 19, and Cora May Cartright, wife of Thomas M.

Police said the two men were recently paroled from the Reformatory in Indiana, and that the girl, who married Cartright a week or two ago, was with the pair in Indiana when they burglarized a shoe store and were sent to the reformatory for the crime.

Hill had his car up in front of his apartments on South Main Street and a few minutes later heard the motor start. He looked out the window and saw two men and a woman in the car, and that it was headed up Main Street and turned west on Court Street.

He immediately notified the police and the State Highway Patrol.

Night policemen Virgil Ingersoll and Elmer Kelley responded to the call and started in pursuit of the trio with the stolen car, overtaking them on the Carr road west of this city, and placing them under arrest.

Monday forenoon they were held to the grand jury under $200 bond each, and later in the day the three of them were transferred to the County Jail to wait grand jury action.

Police also picked up John Achor, on a drunk and disorderly charge, over the week-end.

ter, National Chairman Frank Walker, county chairmen and elected officials to attend.

At a similar gathering last May, Jones was given until July 1 to produce more federal jobs or else. Congress upset this schedule, however, when it failed to appropriate funds for numerous appointive jobs.

Ferguson indicated the chief purpose of his meeting would be to learn "where Ohio stands in Washington."

lived in England, France and Italy since 1911; only one of the group who broadcasts from Italy.

Robert H. Best, 47, a native of Sumter, S. C., former United States army officer and long a correspondent for American interests in Europe.

Frederick Wilhelm Kaltenbach, 48, a native of Dubuque, Iowa, where he was fired from a high school teaching position after organizing a Brown Shirt group among students; a former army officer; worked as a translator and free lance writer in Germany beginning in 1933; described as the Nazis' American counterpart of "Lord Haw-Haw."

Douglas Chandler, 54, a native of Chicago who was reared in Boston; served in the United States navy; worked as a reporter in Baltimore; entered the advertising and later the brokerage business in New York; has been in Europe since 1930; broadcast from Germany as "Paul Revere."

Edward Leo Delany, 57, born in Olney, Ill.; for many years a bit player in stock companies, motion pictures and musical comedies; went to Europe in 1939; known on the Nazi radio as "E. D. Ward" before his broadcasts were stopped in June, 1942.

Constance Drexel, 46, a native of Darmstadt, Germany, who acquired citizenship through her father's naturalization when she was four years old; grew up in Roslindale, Mass., worked as a reporter in Boston, went to Europe as a correspondent in 1915, later working for newspapers in this country; worked on a WPA writer's project in Philadelphia, which she claims as her home.

Jane Anderson, 50, born at Atlanta, Ga., went to New York City at the age of 13 and then to London, where she worked as a reporter; was saved from death at the intersection of the United States' State Department after being arrested as a spy by the Spanish Loyalists; her Nazi broadcasts ceased in April, 1942.

Max Otto Koischwitz, 41, a native of Germany, who was educated there and in France; went to New York in 1925, taught German at Columbia University, transferred to the Hunter College faculty in 1931 and became a citizen through naturalization in 1935; he is known as "O. K." on Nazi broadcasts.

Soldiers make an average of eight moves by railroad between induction and embarkation for service overseas.

unconditional surrender policy laid down by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill and said if all minds are kept on fighting like the devil the Allies will win the war much sooner.

He emphasized that all attention was on military developments.

Moscow: The Russian people were electrified by the news of Mussolini's downfall. The immediate reaction, as heard in homes and on streetcars and subways, was that Germany had suffered a severe blow. Some said they felt this might mean that Italy would drop out of the war in a few weeks, and that even if she carried on, her resistance would be only half-hearted.

New York: Former President Herbert Hoover, in a broadcast at his Palo Alto, Calif., home to a Jewish Conference, said Mussolini's resignation "will give heart to every man and woman in Axis-dominated countries—it is the handwriting on the wall." In New York's big Italian quarter there were impromptu celebrations in the narrow, crowded streets.

Algiers: A Frenchman who reflects French feeling but who would not put his name to be used said the appointment of Badoglio may portend Italy's withdrawal from the war.

Germany: German propagandists asserted in press radio reports that Mussolini's exit was "among developments running counter to the Allies' wishes." Their makeshift line apparently was that the appointment of Badoglio's military government "means Italy's will to resist continues unchanged." One dispatch declared that "the change of government brings no visible change in the German-Italian relationship."

Chungking: There was rejoicing in the streets. And Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, like other members of the cabinet, appeared to be in high spirits.

Downfall Of Mussolini Brings Allies Problems

(EDITOR'S NOTE)—Associated Press War Correspondent Wes Gallagher, back in this country after covering the Tunisian war as a correspondent accredited to General Eisenhower's headquarters, here surveys the possible long-range effects of Mussolini's fall on the military situation and future Allied strategy.)

BY WES GALLAGHER

NEW YORK July 26—(AP)—Italy's surrender, apparently foreshadowed by Mussolini's downfall, would open a "bloodless" second front over night.

It would alter the whole Mediterranean strategy of the Allies and shorten the war against Germany by months and perhaps years. Some of the fruits of victory would be:

1. Allied airfields in Northern Italy from which American and RAF bombers could hammer every corner of Hitler's Reich every hour of the day.

2. Certain collapse of Nazi resistance in the Balkans due to the withdrawal of the Italian garrisons, air pounding of already feeble Axis supply lines leading to Greece and similar peace moves by Hitler's war torn satellites, Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria.

3. A bridgehead in Europe from which Allied troops might force their way into France and the Balkans.

Any Allied entry into Italy also would have its liabilities. These would be:

1. The necessity of finding shipping and food to feed Italy's 40,000,000—a tremendous strain on American and British sea traffic.

2. The necessity of garrisoning Italy with a half million troops.

was more shaken than ever. The Americans took 7,000 more prisoners including six Italian generals and an admiral in their mop up of western Sicily.

An admission that the Axis forces in central Sicily are virtually entrapped by the advancing Allied armies came today from the German-controlled Vichy radio.

"The final assault on Catania seems imminent," said a broadcast recorded by the ministry of information. "Five-sixths of Sicily now is in Allied hands and it is not certain whether the Axis forces in the center of the island will succeed in reaching the east coast in time."

More than 70,000 prisoners now are in Allied hands of whom 56,000 were taken by Americans.

To date, 10 generals and two admirals have surrendered.

It was officially estimated that three and a half German divisions and three Italian divisions were bottled up in the northeastern corner of Sicily.

Allied planes kept up their incessant hammering, and the Axis supply port of Milazzo west of Messina was blasted Saturday night with many fires started. Road objectives near Orlando also were hit.

The successful conclusion of the western campaign permitted the American forces to swing around to menace the right flank of the principal remaining Axis forces holding positions bounded on the south by the Dettina River, three miles south of Catania, running west through Catenanuova, northwest to Regalbuto, and then bending sharply to the north to the Tyrrhenian Sea. Messina, two miles from the Italian mainland and Axis escape-hatch, is the apex of the triangle.

AIR WAR—United Nations air fleets hit the Axis harder than ever, often more than ever in a series of record blows over the week-end.

RAF heavy bombers made another mass attack on Essen Sunday night, after dropping a record of 2,300 long tons of bombs on Hamburg from 1,000 planes Saturday night. American Flying Fortresses, striking with greater force than ever before, blasted four Axis bases—Warnemuende, near the Baltic port of Rostock, the seaplane base at Wustrow and the shipyards of Kiel and Hamburg by daylight Sunday. Mosquito bombers harassed Hamburg, still smoking from these two mighty blows, again last night, and fresh squadrons of raiders roared across the channel today, scarcely before the great night fleets had returned to base. The British last 12 bombers at Hamburg and 25 at Essen, while the Americans lost 19.

PACIFIC—Allied warplanes delivered two of the biggest assaults of the Pacific war yesterday, more than 200 planes dropped 186 tons of bombs on the Japanese at Munda, beleaguered air base in the Solomons, while 600 miles to the west, Australians made the greatest raid yet on Gasmata airdrome in New Britain.

RUSSIA—The Red army, driving toward the encirclement of Orel, the giant hedgehog 200 miles south of Moscow which the Germans have held nearly two years, was reported within six miles of cutting that base's main railroad communication with Bryansk following a fresh gain of 2½ to 5½ miles. Thirty more villages were taken by the Russians in their advance.

In Sicily some units of the American Seventh Army were far east of Termini, throwing themselves forward in a headlong dash to unseat the Axis defense before it could be well established.

In the tiny tip, hardly more than the size of Cap Bon where the Axis met disaster in Tunisia, it was estimated there were no more than three and a half German divisions and three Italian divisions, hastily gathered to block the gateway to Italy.

Allied aircraft yesterday attacked the Sicilian port of Milazzo and targets near Orlando. But these raids were a letdown from the powerful blows reported in the previous 24 hours when Flying Fortresses smashed at the railroad yards in Bologna, in a record 1,500-mile round trip flight to northern Italy, and other formations hit railway and port objectives at more than half a dozen other Italian and Sicilian cities.

Giving a fresh demonstration of the helplessness of Italy, British home-based Lancasters Saturday night completed a shuttle bombing mission by hitting the northern naval base of Leghorn en route home from North Africa.

Downfall Of Mussolini Brings Allies Problems

(EDITOR'S NOTE)—Associated Press War Correspondent Wes Gallagher, back in this country after covering the Tunisian war as a correspondent accredited to General Eisenhower's headquarters, here surveys the possible long-range effects of Mussolini's fall on the military situation and future Allied strategy.)

BY WES GALLAGHER

NEW YORK July 26—(AP)—Italy's surrender, apparently foreshadowed by Mussolini's downfall, would open a "bloodless" second front over night.

It would alter the whole Mediterranean strategy of the Allies and shorten the war against Germany by months and perhaps years. Some of the fruits of victory would be:

1. Allied airfields in Northern Italy from which American and RAF bombers could hammer every corner of Hitler's Reich every hour of the day.

2. Certain collapse of Nazi resistance in the Balkans due to the withdrawal of the Italian garrisons, air pounding of already feeble Axis supply lines leading to Greece and similar peace moves by Hitler's war torn satellites, Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria.

3. A bridgehead in Europe from which Allied troops might force their way into France and the Balkans.

Any Allied entry into Italy also would have its liabilities. These would be:

1. The necessity of finding shipping and food to feed Italy's 40,000,000—a tremendous strain on American and British sea traffic.

2. The necessity of garrisoning Italy with a half million troops.

NUTRITIONIST TALKS TO LOCAL COMMITTEEMEN

Says Many People Do Not Know What To Eat For Health

"A lot of people with plenty of money don't know what to eat," Martha Koehne, Ph. D. told an audience at a meeting of the Fayette County Nutrition Committee Friday afternoon. Dr. Koehne is a nutritionist from the Ohio Department of Health. The meeting was held in the office of W. W. Montgomery, county extension agent.

Dr. Koehne stated that not only the "underprivileged" suffered from malnutrition and dietary defects. Research indicates that even nurses and physicians, some of them employed in nutrition offices, have dietary deficiencies.

She indicated that the state nutritional program is designed to reach not only the underprivileged or isolated rural citizens, but people of means as well.

Dr. Koehne stressed the importance of home canning and preservation of fruits and vegetables in maintaining well balanced diets.

Plans for holding a home canning demonstration were discussed by members of the committee during the business meeting, but no definite plans were made.

HEALTH MUSEUM TO HAVE DISPLAY

Food Facts and Fallacies Will Be Included in Exhibits

Displays from the Cleveland Health Museum will be exhibited at the Fayette County Fair by the county department of Health in addition to the first aid station usually maintained.

"Food Facts and Fallacies" is the title of one exhibit, in which 12 popular food fallacies are demonstrated by 20 colored wax models. The answers to the fallacies are covered with triangular panels and can only be revealed by lifting these coverings.

A tuberculosis display, also from the Cleveland Health Museum, will be sponsored by the Fayette County Christmas Seal Committee. This exhibit will be shown in the Board of Health booth between the grandstand and the highway.

A fluorine illuminator will be on display to demonstrate methods of reading x-ray films. Several such films, mostly of tubercular cases, will be shown to the public. This illuminator was purchased last winter by the Christmas seal committee.

The first aid station will be under the supervision of one or two registered nurses during the entire fair. County first aid equipment will be available for emergencies.

MOVEMENT HELD BEST FOR SPRAINED ANKLES

CHICAGO (AP)—The best treatment for sprained ankles is to use them immediately and normally, according to Lt. Comdr. Paul E. McMaster, U.S.N.R., writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Reporting on 500 cases he has observed, Lt. Comdr. McMaster says that when the pain in the injured part was suppressed, either by injections or by adhesive tape, the patients who returned immediately to normal activity and moved the foot and ankle improved more rapidly than those who did not.

Fayette County Soldier May Be Ordered To Farm

Pfc. Wilfred Leo Hines may soon be changing his khaki uniform for a pair of farmer's overalls and going back to produce the food so vital for victory.

Pfc. Hines went into the service this spring and has been stationed at Camp Crowder, Mo., considered by soldiers as one of the toughest and most thorough training centers in the country. He had just recently completed his rigorous basic training and was getting ready for the polishing off process and specialized training, which soldiers say is a snap compared to those first few weeks of toughing up.

The difficulties began to pile up back home on the farm on the Pleasant View road about five miles north of Jeffersonville. His father, J. O. Hines, suffering with a heart ailment that was steadily growing worse, was taken to the Veterans Hospital at Dayton. After an examination, he came back home with the physicians' word that he no longer could stand the strenuous work on the farm. But, this being wartime and with a son in uniform needing food, Mrs. Hines rolled up her sleeves, figuratively, and pitched in to do a man's work. She could find no help and the incapacitated husband and father fretted and worried.

A slight woman who knew farming only by close association, feeding the stock, plowing and cultivating the corn and putting up hay, Mrs. Hines began to wilt under the pressure that would have been hard on a robust man.

But, much as food is needed for the country's armed forces, its Allies and civilians at home, Uncle Sam is both sympathetic and practical. The War Manpower Commission has made it plain that boys on the farm are in as essential positions as those on the battlefields. So, the wheels were set in motion to "ship out" Pfc. Hines—not to the battlefields of Europe or the far Pacific but, to the job on the home front which apparently could not be satisfactorily filled by anyone else. His papers have not yet gone through, it is understood. His assignment to the farm front is being held up until it is certain his place cannot be filled.

Mrs. Hines, who recently returned from Camp Crowder, has seen her son as a soldier. While she admits she worries about him "just like any mother worries about a son in the army of war" she has not let her worries blur her perspective or ambitions for her son to have what he wants—even to soldiering and fighting on a battlefield.

Pfc. Hines wants to stay in the army, wants to "go across" with his outfit. He wants to have a soldier's part in this war. But, his mother said he told her he would come home "if that's the place where I'm needed most and where they want me to go."

The wife of a veteran of the first World War, wants her son back home and makes no secret of it. But she is proud of him as a soldier and also wants him to go off to war because he wants to. She also realizes he would miss experiences he never would have otherwise and would see the World as he probably never would get to see it again.

If Pfc. Hines is sent back to the farm by Uncle Sam, he will be so far as known, the first one to come back to Fayette County under such circumstances. Others have been given medical discharges and others have been discharged because they were over the age limit, but while they were under instructions to work on the farm or in a war industry, these were not the primary reasons for their release.

LITTLE CHATS ON PUBLIC NOTICES
By JAMES E. POLLARD
Copyright, 1943

A Basic Difference
As each month of the war has shown, there are deep fundamental differences between the United Nations and the Axis powers. Since this is true of their philosophy, it is reflected in their actions. It would be basically impossible for the United Nations to subscribe to such ideas as Hitler's "new order," or Japan's "co-prosperity sphere" in East Asia, or to knuckle to the cruelty and barbarity of either foe.

Another basic difference lies in their attitude toward due process and its twin, due notice. Just as Hitler did against Poland and Russia, so did Japan strike without notice against Russia in 1904 and at Pearl Harbor in 1941. To the gangster nations these were only surprise attacks but to the civilized world they were treachery.

In domestic and civil matters the basic idea behind Public Notices is to give proper notice with reasonable time. This is what makes them a bulwark of safety in personal and public affairs. The bully nations would not appreciate this.

AMERICAN WAR CORRESPONDENTS TRUE UNARMED HEROES OF FIGHTING FRONT

By HOYT McAFEE

(Central Press Correspondent)

Armed only with pen and notebook, with typewriters and cameras, foreign correspondents today are taking the same risks as fighting men to report war news from the world's far-flung battle fronts. Frequently their adventures and experiences read like high drama. Certainly their assignments require courage, sacrifice and resourcefulness, in order that you may get as clear, accurate and detailed a picture of the news as censorship will permit.

When you consider the respective numbers involved on both sides, press correspondents have, in proportion, paid a much heavier toll in this war than the fighting forces. In scores upon scores of instances they have exposed, and continued to expose, themselves to the greatest of dangers without, however, having any deadly weapons with which to strike back.

The honor roll of foreign correspondents who have paid with their lives serves to remind again that covering a war is a deadly earnest and often dangerous business, and not the glamorous, romantic occupation Hollywood would have you believe it is.

Those of us who covered the Spanish Civil War as well as the reading public, felt a keen personal loss when Edward J. Neil, Jr., Associated Press correspondent, met an untimely death. This came about when an explosive shell hit the car in which he was touring a fighting front. Neil was a colorful and a brilliant reporter. He came pretty close to being a Richard Harding Davis in his own right.

First Casualty of War
Soon after the outbreak of World War II, Kenneth Brown Collins, a Liberty magazine reporter, was killed when a torpedo struck his ship. During the nearly 17 months that America has been involved in conflict, scarcely a month has passed without your reading that at least one foreign correspondent has lost his life.

Look at the roster of those who have paid the supreme sacrifice—a roster which exemplifies the courage of young men and their devotion to and enthusiasm for their great profession:
JACK SINGER, International News Service correspondent, killed when a Japanese torpedo plowed through the wardrobe of the aircraft carrier Wasp. Even as death came, Jack was busy at his typewriter, banging out a story of heroic action he had witnessed.

HARRY PERCY, United Press, a victim of malaria in Cairo, Egypt.
WEBB MILLER, United Press, who fell to his death from a London train in the blackout.

MELVILLE JACOBY, Time magazine, killed in an airplane accident in Australia—a crash which also took the life of an American brigadier general.

LEA BURDETTE, New York PM, slain by bandits in Iran.

DON BELL, NBC reporter, who met death at the hands of Japanese soldiers in Manila. They bayoneted him.

EUGENE PETROV, North American Newspaper Alliance, hit and mortally wounded by shell fire during the siege of Sevastopol, the great Russian seaport.

BYRON DARTON, roving correspondent for the New York Times, killed by gunfire in New Guinea.

BEN MILLER, Baltimore Sun, killed in a plane crash while touring the home front.

EDWARD HENRY CROCKETT, Associated Press, killed when the British vessel to which he was assigned was torpedoed. Crockett had just been sent to the Mediterranean to replace AP's picture-prize winner, and now a captive in Italian hands.

RALPH BARNES, New York Herald-Tribune, killed on a news-gathering mission in the European theater of war.

ROBERT P. POST, New York Times, who accompanied United States bombers on a mission over Germany objectives, but who did not return.

FRANK CAHEL, Mutual Broadcasting System, who met death when a Pan-American Airways clipper crashed into the angry Tagus River near Lisbon, Portugal.

BEN ROBERTSON, New York Herald-Tribune, who lost his life in the same clipper tragedy.

Several months ago Navy Secretary Frank Knox called attention to the price correspondents have to pay and the risks they have to face, to get first-hand news. Elmer Davis, head of the Office of War Information, recently paid tribute to the hardy and valiant band of foreign correspondents who report today's global war, from the front line. From Kent Cooper, head of the Associated Press, came praise the other day for today's historians, the press correspondents.

A bill was proposed in the house of representatives not long ago for the creation of a medal of honor for those foreign correspondents who distinguish themselves in news gathering and news reporting. Already Joseph V. Connolly, International News Service president, has created an award for presentation to international reporters who take long chances and display heroism in covering their war assignments.

WRITTEN IN BLOOD—The day-by-day accounts of the battles of American fighting forces have not been written without human sacrifice. U. S. war correspondents, working right up in the front lines, have performed their duties with as much bravery as the fighting men have performed theirs. Proof lies in the lengthening roll of honor of newsmen who have lost their lives or were wounded in action.

Sustains 11 Wounds
Leo Disher, United Press correspondent, received from military authorities the Purple Heart for bravery displayed during the landing operations at Oran. Limping on a sprained ankle, Disher nevertheless made his way ashore with landing forces and sustained 11 wounds. Recently President Roosevelt directed that Henry T. Gorrell, United Press foreign correspondent, be awarded an air medal for gallantry under fire.

He rendered vital aid to a seriously wounded member of a bombing crew, saving the latter's life.
Gorrell thrilled us all by one of his spectacular exploits during the Spanish Civil War. He had fallen into the hands of wild Moorish troops, those mercenaries El Caudillo Francisco Franco had imported from Spanish Morocco to help him wage war on the Loyalist government. They showed every sign of wanting to make short shrift of Gorrell—by firing squad. Persuasive and an expert linguist, he managed to talk himself out of that tight situation.

A look at the records shows that war's toll has taken the lives of 16 foreign correspondents, 34 have been wounded, two are now missing, 25 have been captured, and 50 are interned, today, in enemy countries. As for the missing, they are Witt Hancock, Associated Press of whom no word has been received since the Japs overrun Java, and William MacDougall, United Press, who has not been heard from since the Japanese conquest of Java.

Robert Nixon, International News Service, showed the courageous stuff of which he was made when he defied death to escape the hell of Dunkirk. Frank Hewlett, United Press, warned everyone by his gallantry in reporting the heroic resistance of American and Filipino forces on Bataan and Corregidor—even while his wife was a captive of the Japs. W. W. Chaplin, International News Service correspondent, stood his ground unflinchingly and did a masterful piece of reporting of an incident in which Indian mobs stoned him.

C. Yates McDaniel, Associated Press, wrote a last-minute, exciting story of the fall of Singapore, then boarded a steamer and fled for his life. Presently his steamer was bombed and sunk. McDaniel and his companions made their way to a small island on lifeboats. Having bought a native junk, they skirted the coast of Sumatra and reached Australia.

No foreign correspondent's story of adventure has outthrilled that of shy 34-year-old Vern Haugland, Associated Press, whose 43-day trek through the jungles of New Guinea will thrill school children of future generations. Forced down in a wild stretch of New Guinea (he jumped in a parachute from a United States bomber in distress). Haugland stumbled over unknown trails and kept alive entirely on berries and the juices of grass and weeds.

Day after day of drenching tropical rain. His wet, dirty clothes stuck to him. At night he often slept in mud and muck. The ceaseless sun beat down upon him mercilessly, parching his lips and making him more and more feverish. It was, all in all a living nightmare.

Weeks wore on, and still he wandered around aimlessly in the jungle country. Through it all, as reflected in his diary, his fighting spirit was high; his will to live unshakable. Finally after endless days and nights of groping and searching for any vestige of civilization, he came to a native village a goodly distance back inland.

It was there that missionaries found young Vern Haugland, man of great courage, in a delirious condition. A five-day journey carried him back to a hospital on the coast. And it was while he was recuperating there that Gen. Douglas MacArthur presented Haugland, a civilian, the Silver Star. Said MacArthur:

Inspired MacArthur
"I am awarding you (Vern Haugland) the Silver Star as an outward symbol of the devotion and fortitude with which you have done your duty. I cannot tell you how much we have been inspired by your getting back after such trials and hardships!"

Clark Lee, who recently left the Associated Press to join International News Service, and the late Jack Singer of the International News Service, hold the distinction of being the first and only reporters ever to go forth on an attack in carrier-based torpedo planes. During one flight over a Guadalcanal position, Lee observed an anti-aircraft gun (Japanese) below. Quickly he pointed it out to the pilot of his plane. Thereupon well-aimed bombs were dropped, and 67 Japs were killed.

Having dodged bombs, and discovered the location of land mines in the nick of time, and covered the battles of Bataan and Corregidor, Lee left Manila in flames early in 1942 and proceeded to Cebu. From there, he, the late Melville Jacoby (Life and Time) and Annabel Lee Jacoby traveled to Australia by Filipino freighter, a voyage which lasted 22 days. Lee has earned distinction by dint of the excellent quality of his reporting in this war.

And now it's time to give women reporters the credit due them for their first-class coverage of the war on several fronts. The list includes Martha Gellhorn of Collier's, Alice Leone Moats of the same magazine, (she's now headed for Spain, after far journeys in India, China and Russia); Ruth Cowan of Associated Press, assigned to North Africa; Inez Robb, International News Service, North Africa; Mary Welsh,

Time, assigned to England; Dixie Tighe, International News Service; Kathleen Harriman, Newsweek; Helen Kirkpatrick, Chicago Daily News; Leu Miller, Vogue; and Tania Long, New York Times—all of whom cover the British Isles.

We must not overlook the prettiest women reporter of them all, Betty Graham, who for long months hobnobbed with Chinese guerrillas throughout North China. She went alone and unescorted among them, and wrote some thrilling stories of their deeds in sabotaging the Japs and liberating Chinese villages.

Prisoner Larry Allen
As for foreign correspondents now interned in enemy countries, Larry Allen is by far the best-known and most accomplished. When the British destroyer Sikh was lost during a commando operation off Tobruk last September 13, Larry was forced to make it ashore in a lifeboat. Jubilantly, Italians took him captive, treated him as a special prize. Running true to form, the irrepressible Allen demanded an interview with German commander Rommel. The Italians had not stopped gasping over that one, until Allen asked to be exchanged for two Axis prisoners in British hands.

All of Allen's self-assurance and demands were in vain, however, because today he languishes in a dreary Italian detention camp near Chiati, Italy, not very far from Rome.

Energetic and impatient to be back in journalistic harness, covering action on a fighting front, Allen dashes off letters to Pope Pius, President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull. A letter from Secretary Hull recently dealt Allen's hopes of being exchanged at an early date, a hard blow. It seems that the Italians are very angry over some blistering articles Allen has written in the past—articles unfavorable to Italy; and that they are not at all inclined to let him go, lest he cut loose with pieces even more damaging to them.

From the typewriters of foreign correspondents who are living lives filled with so much action and adventure and exciting experience, flow a steady stream of books which add clarity, meaning and vital information to current literature. When the history of this war finally comes to be written, the output of correspondents on the scenes of action will prove useful and enlightening to what-ever writers handle the material.

WHAT MEN ARE FIGHTING FOR

If there is any question in the minds of the people on our civilian front or among politicians as to what this nation is fighting for, there is little, if any, in the minds of the men bearing the brunt of battle.
In the hot and matted jungles of the South Pacific, in the midst of crashing bombs and bursting shells in Sicily, along the snowy chilled peaks of the Aleutians, hundreds of thousands of American men realize better than anybody else what they really feel in their hearts that they are fighting for.

To those grimy, tired men there is no mystery about the objectives of this war. They have no notions about any post-war Utopia. Nor are they fighting for any world superstate. They are fighting just for home.

They want to come back to the farms and to tree-lined streets, to the same room at the front of the house where the birds chatter in the early morning, to a job, a girl, the family. They want to have some fun and to make some money and to be able to buy the little extras. They want to get ahead on their own steam, as their fathers did, and their grandfathers did before them.

On battlefronts all over the world, Americans of all politics and all faiths are fighting together with just such simple thoughts in their minds. They do not worry about the next man's politics or religion. They kid each other in their good-humored American way. But back in all their minds is that one thought of home, the home they knew before this war started.

Maybe Americans on the home front are confused and bewildered. It would do them good to know how the men far away feel about things. These men want to come back to the America they left, and Americans at home have the duty of keeping it that way for them, and trying to make it even better.

HUMBAG TAXATION
From now on the public must think straight and without prejudice on the matter of taxation, or the best laid post-war plans will become worthless scraps of paper.
When business men plead for adequate corporate reserves for reconversion of industry to peace-time production, they are pleading not for themselves but for the millions who must be employed by industry when the war is over. If taxes prohibit the accumulation of adequate corporate reserves, it is not the business man who will suffer most. It will be the people looking for jobs—jobs that only industry can provide despite tempting ballyhoo which would have us believe that, come what may, we need not worry because the government will take up the slack in employment.

Senator George, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, in warning that: "Reserves for post-war contingencies and conversion to peace-time activities, and for deferred maintenance and repairs, must be established and built up out of earnings during the war," speaks a truth with which there can be no compromise. And yet there are plenty of politicians who are trying at this very moment to undermine the stability of industry the same as they sought to in peacetime—by inequitable taxation—and they are doing it for the same reason they did it in peacetime, namely, because they think it appeals to the voters. These politics-as-usual politicians are the worst threat to the future of this nation.

The people must realize private industry is their strongest ally in peace and war. It is the bulwark of freedom. It can be destroyed by humbug taxation.

PROSPECTIVE CANDIDATE POLLS
Next year's Presidential nominating conventions are almost a year away and the election is more than 15 months in the future, but the growing practice of taking polls on the slightest provocation has already centered on the political sweepstakes.

Rep. E. L. Allen of Illinois was moved the other day to check on his colleagues in the House of Congress of Republican persuasion to see how they stand on the various men mentioned as possibilities for the Presidential nomination.

There are 207 Republicans in the House, the largest number in more than a decade, and Congressman Allen succeeded in obtaining straw votes from 180. The question he asked each of them to answer was worded:

"If you were a delegate to the Republican convention and the convention was now in session whom would you vote for as the man best qualified to serve as President and the most certain to win the election?"

The vote was scattered among 17 favorites led by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York with 51 votes. General Douglas MacArthur came next with 33; Governor Bricker of Ohio was third with 32. In fourth place, with 13 votes, was Willie.

and poultry raised in the province. Cabuya and other fiber plants that grow wild in that area are being domesticated and seedlings prepared for wide distribution.
In the uplands, where wild rubber is found in commercial quantities, machetes have been "sold" to the natives, with the understanding that they may pay for them with their first 15 pounds of raw rubber.
Behind all this is one primary theme — the training of the Ecuadorians and the Orones to take over and carry on when the Rockefeller office commission and the other agencies pull out.
El Oro is small indeed compared to the vast areas that will have to be rehabilitated as they are recaptured from the Nazis, but there just the same. Give them medicine, food, health, and an opportunity to work out their own destinies with the best of modern knowledge.

Diagnosing Nazi Madness

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

OUT OF the welter of plans for the reconstruction of Germany after the war comes at last a medical diagnosis. It is contained in a book called Is Germany Incurable?
Dr. Clendingen will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

by Richard M. Brickner (published by J. B. Lippincott, Philadelphia). Dr. Brickner is an eminent and experienced psychiatrist, and he charges quite plainly that in his professional opinion Germany is a pathological case—that the whole nation is showing a paranoid trend.

A paranoid trend is towards a condition which used to be called paranoia, a word psychiatrists do not like to use any more. Paranoia is a chronic monomania, and one of the most dangerous of mental diseases. Paranoiacs are killers of the type of Czolgosz and Hauptmann.

The basis for the diagnosis Dr. Brickner adduces from first-hand evidence, by the words and deeds of Germans for the past hundred years or more.

Symptoms Outlined
The four German symptoms pointing to a paranoid trend are:

1. Megalomania. — "German character may yet become the salvation of the world," Emmanuel Geibel, 1861. "Perhaps before much time passes the German will govern the world," Otto Julius Langgeln, 1891. "The German nation is always right because it is German," Otto Tannenber, 1911.
2. The Need to Dominate. — "Woe and death to those who resist my will. Woe and death to those who do not believe in my mission," Kaiser Wilhelm, 1914.
3. Persecution Complex. — "Germany must no longer be the world's spittoon," Prince August Wilhelm, 1935. "We are encircled by enemies," Ernest Hasse, 1907.
4. Retrospective Falsification. — "When have the German people ever broken their word?" Adolf Hitler, 1935.

Prescription for Treatment
As a prescription for treatment, Dr. Brickner points out that in nearly all paranoid minds there are "clear areas"—areas of sanity that can be developed towards cure. In the German population today he believes that there are sane groups who are "clear areas" and these can be utilized to bring peace and reason to that disturbed and unhappy country.

What do I as a physician think of Dr. Brickner's diagnosis and plan of treatment? Several years ago I published an article in which I made a diagnosis of Hitler on the basis of his own words in Mein Kampf and gave as my opinion that he was unquestionably a paranoiac. (Remember, one of the dangerous things about a paranoiac is that he may be a very able, skillful planner in many fields.)

Trends Are Contagious
Paranoid trends are undoubtedly contagious, and there must be a large zone of them around Hitler. But long ago, speaking of nothing else but America, Edmund Burke said, "I do not know the method of drawing up an indictment against a whole people." I have a feeling that there are larger clear areas among the German people than Dr. Brickner allows.

As for the treatment, paranoid trends are notoriously unlikely of cure. If Dr. Brickner's exploitation of the "clear areas" do not work, what is left for Germany? Miss Dorothy Thompson says they cannot be re-educated. The alternative is unthinkable.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
F. M. T.:—What is the cause of hemorrhages under the finger nails?
Answer: A condition of the blood called purpura will do it.

G. B.:—Might a medicine that colors the urine green be given for diabetes? Might I be allowed to go into a coma before giving me insulin?
Answer: Any kind of medicine might be given you, but there is no medicine that turns the urine green that is good for diabetes. Not only might you go into coma before being given insulin, but you are very much more likely to go into coma without insulin than with it. Why not take it? You are badly mixed up about your diabetes. You had better go to a doctor before you die of confused thinking.

D. R.:—What causes a child to cough without having a cold?
Answer: Large tuberculous glands around the windpipe, whooping cough, having inhaled a foreign body such as a pin, irritation from the nose or throat, a growth on the vocal cords, pleurisy and several other things.

Leave My Heart Alone

ADELAIDE HUMPHRIES

SYNOPSIS
KAREN BELLE, wealthy and lovely, has been the sweetheart of another member of her rich Florida set. PAUL WATT, since childhood. However, she surprisingly encounters a young stranger, obviously not of her social standing, and learns that he is MARTIN HALLIDAY.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN
AS KAREN drove the station wagon to meet the train that was bringing her father and Paul and her nephew home, her heart was in her throat, or at least so it seemed. It was silly, she knew, but so much she felt, depended upon this first meeting. That was why she had driven the station wagon herself, instead of letting Crawford, the Bells' chauffeur, who took care of the four cars in the big garage, meet the train.

Usually late, as there was nothing she disliked more than waiting, Karen was ahead of time for this important event. And of course the train would be behind schedule, 20 minutes behind, the station master informed her.

"There was another party just inquiring for the train, Miss Bell," he added. He had been behind his window for a number of years and knew who Karen was, as he did most of the people, important or otherwise, who lived "thereabouts," as he termed it. "They were inquiring for you, too," he added in a significant tone, if the words were noncommittal.

Karen wondered who the "party" could be. She had not told any of her friends that she was meeting this train. She did not believe Paul had sent word to anyone else when he had sent a second wire stating the time of arrival. She did not want anyone else to be present, or even to know about Denise's boy coming home until the child got used to things, or "acclimated," as the natives would say.

There was no one in the waiting room, but when she stepped outside onto the platform she saw that there was another occupant, perched on a baggage truck, swinging his long legs and looking as if he were perched there to wait for her, as well as the incoming train, since he did not jump down, but just waved a greeting.

"What are you doing here?" Karen asked, using the same words with which she had addressed him once before when he had taken her by surprise, which he had apparently been a habit with him. But she did not use the same tone, haughty and indignant. She sounded glad, as indeed she was, for she had been wondering about the next meeting that inevitably would take place, with Fate so bent on throwing them together; and she had hoped it would be public and casual, like this, as otherwise it might well have been a bit embarrassing, remembering that kiss and the moon, as Karen had been afraid she would.

The person on the truck was Martin. He did not look the least embarrassed, or as if he had anything on his conscience. His eyes were just as direct and blue, his grin just as contagious in the glancing light of day as under the magic spell of moonlight. He was not a handsome young man, like Paul, but he had something all his own. There was no getting away from that.

"Waiting for you," he said in reply to her question. "An occupation well rewarded. You look very stunning this morning, miss, in your blue slacks and with that ribbon in your corn-colored locks, though I don't, as a rule, approve of pants for ladies."

"Oh, dear," Karen said, her own blue eyes widening in dismay. "I didn't think about that! Slacks being pants, I mean. I'm so used to going around in slacks and shorts and play tops, as everyone does down here. But they might look funny to a little boy. He might think I was a man, or something. It's so important I look all right the first time he sees me."

The funny thing, really, was the way she said the things she thought, and felt, to Martin Halliday, maybe because that was another habit with him. However, Karen usually did not blurt out the things inside her; it wasn't a habit with her.

His grin broadened, if possible. He said, "No one could possibly mistake you for a man—or something. That ribbon I mentioned before would do away with any doubt, even if you were not so completely feminine. People do go around here in peculiar get-ups, almost in the raw, some of them. But I can assure you that were I a small boy, seeing you for the first time, I should approve of what I saw all right! And since, as you reminded me once, I was a boy once upon a time, you ought to take my word for it."

"You really think so?" Her tone still was doubtful. Had she had time, she would have driven back across the bridge to change to an outfit with a skirt. But half of those 20 minutes were gone. Waiting need not always be so lksome, after all.

Martin assured her once more that she would do as she was. "If I were going to pick out an aunty," he said, "I'm sure I'd pick on you. In fact, I wish you were my aunt. I'd like to feel there was someone waiting for me, some time, with the look you've got in your eyes now. I'd know then the world was a pretty good place, in spite of Hitler and his gang."

He sounded so sincere that Karen was reassured. He must have said all that, too, because he guessed how jittery she felt, how much this meeting meant to her. But how had he known that it was to take place this morning? She would have asked, but he would have laughed and put her off with some such reminder as that he had told her he knew everything about her. He liked to be mysterious about such things, or maybe he liked to tease. But when it came to coming across with the important issues this contradictory young man always had a right answer tucked up his sleeve.

This time he had more than that. He jumped down off the baggage cart now, turning to pick up a somewhat bulky package that had been beside him. "Here's a little something," he held it out to her, and now his face did have as near an embarrassed expression as he probably could assume, due to an attempt to appear off-hand, rather than to confusion or guilt. "It's nothing much, just something I made. It's for that little fellow."

"Why, that's terribly nice of you," Karen was more pleased and touched than she could tell him, more so that he himself had made it. "May I ask what it is, or may I have three guesses?"

"You won't need that many." Her words had put him back at ease. He had not wanted a profusion of thanks; he liked her warm appreciation. "It's a boat, and it really will sail. I whittled it out and copied it after the best model I could find, and did I have fun doing it!" He wore a grin that would have become a little boy, so that Karen smiled with him.

She said, "You must come over to our beach some time—soon—and help my nephew sail it." For if Marty knew that the boat would work he must have had fun trying that, too.

"I'll take you up on that." His eyes smiled back into hers. "I'm looking forward to knowing that little chap. But he ought to be here any second now. In fact, I thought I heard the train whistle. Keep your chin up, sister. You'll know just what to do and say and I must be on my way now."

"But if you want to see him, why are you running away?" She would not mind if Martin was with her, although she had thought she did not want anyone.

"Because this is your big moment, not mine." He gave her another knowing smile before he turned to stride out of sight around the corner of the little station. He turned, once more, to wave again, this time in farewell, his hands clasped together, as if he were shaking on his last prediction, that she would know just what to say and do.

It was almost uncanny the way he could look inside a person. More uncanny than knowing things and bobbing up in unexpected places.

The train whistled again. It was in sight now. The wooden platform quivered with the vibration. Karen's heart rose in her throat again. Her eyes were straining for that first glimpse. There they were, her dad and Paul's dark head over his broad shoulder—someone, yes a little boy, being carefully helped down the steps, now that the train had come to a stop.

And then Karen was beside them, throwing her father a smile in welcome, a bright nod in Paul's direction, but it was the little boy, such a little boy, now that she saw him close, frail and frightened looking, with enormous dark eyes and such white skin, that she knelt down beside him and gathered him to her heart that was filled with love only, love that wiped out all her own trepidation and that was big enough, with time, to wipe out his.

It's a Fad To Learn Some New Language
By ARLENE WOLF
Learn a language. Learn any language. Everybody's doing it. Maybe you're too busy to go to school, but that's no obstacle. Just sit in your living room, turn on the radio, and out comes a language. Or open a neat little case of records, and put one on the phonograph.

If you're social-minded, there's a playing card method, so you can share new knowledge with the rest of the family. Should you crave variety, there's even a course that gives a smattering of seven different tongues at one time.

Interest in languages has more than doubled since the outbreak of war, according to conservative estimates. Some authorities link this new interest with a trend toward anti-isolationism. The fact that people want to know other languages, they say, shows a desire to participate in things international.

Others attribute it to the fact that thousands of men and women going into the services feel another language will be a necessity.

"War Linguistics," Dr. Mario Pei's bird's-eye view course at Columbia University makes the student proficient in identifying various languages—a vital thing for a soldier in a foreign land.

Remember back in high school when you sat and wearily conjugated "I love, you love, he loves, we love, they love, you love?" Those days are gone forever. The new "direct methods" by which millions of Americans are learning today, make a detour around grammar and plunge headlong into practical conversation.

It's the only natural way to learn," Max Sherover, director of the Linguaphone Institute insists. "A child learns to speak long before he worries about grammar. In past years, we've succeeded in making simple things far too complex. Old school methods taught the student to read and translate, but not to speak. Today, we're going back to the fundamentals of the spoken word."

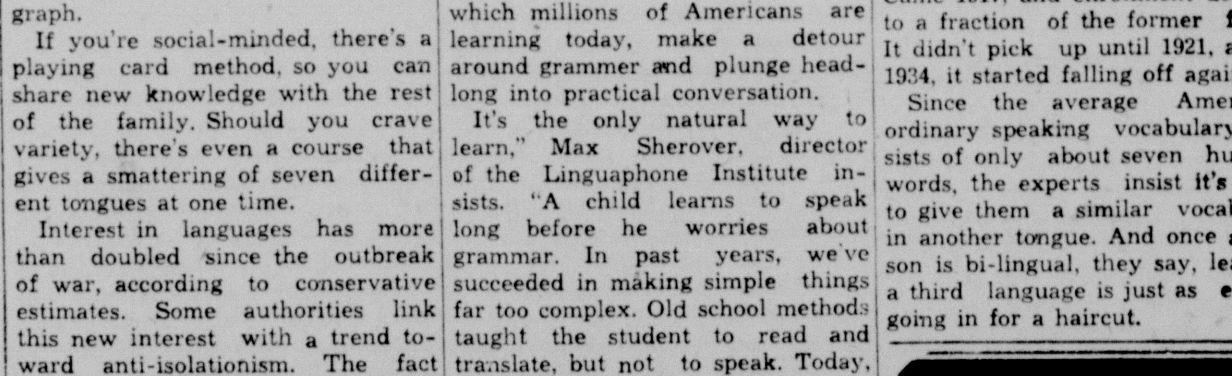

Spanish is the most popular new language for Americans today. French, which was number one on the list, fell off with Vichy, but has been making a comeback since the North African campaign. Russian is also high on the list of present-day favorites. And there was a concerted rush after Pearl Harbor among persons who thought

Japanese would be handy to know. Interest in languages has always been connected closely with European politics, even among high school students. German is a classic example of this fluctuation. Before the first World War, German was the leading foreign language studied in New York's high schools. Came 1917, and enrollment declined to a fraction of the former figure. It didn't pick up until 1921, and in 1924, it started falling off again.

Since the average American's ordinary speaking vocabulary consists of only about seven hundred words, the experts insist it's easy to give them a similar vocabulary in another tongue. And once a person is bi-lingual, they say, learning a third language is just as easy as going in for a haircut.

Double Ring Ceremony Unites Dorothy Baughman And Lt. Howard Williams

Ceremony Is Performed in Lutheran Trinity Church, in San Angelo, Texas

In a quiet double ring ceremony performed Saturday evening, July 17, Miss Dorothy Vegene Baughman, daughter of Mrs. Nellie L. Baughman of Columbus and Lieutenant Howard Leslie Williams, brother of Mrs. Ralph Marchant of this city, were united in marriage.

The rites were read at 7:30 o'clock by the Rev. Victor Buvinghausen in the Lutheran Trinity Church, San Angelo, Texas, with a short selection of organ melodies preceding the ceremony played by Mrs. Henry Dahl, who also sang, "I Love You Truly."

The bride was becomingly gowned in a white taffeta gown, fashioned with short sleeves, sweetheart neckline and a full skirt with insertions of white chiffon. Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a tiara of seed pearls, and she carried a bridal bouquet of white carnations and maline, centered by white orchids.

Miss Ruby Williams, maid of feta trimmed with ruffles of pink net and her flowers were of pink carnations and blue agapanthus lilies.

Lieutenant John W. Gothie of Hazelton, Pa., and now a bombardier instructor, attended the bridegroom as best man.

The church was decorated with baskets of peach gladioli and two white, seven branch candelabra, holding white tapers, forming an archway for the bridal party.

A reception-dinner was held at Steve's Ranch House for the young couple immediately following the ceremony.

The bride received her degree in public school music from Capital University, and formerly taught in Madison Township school and the past year as instructor in Columbus Public Schools.

Lieutenant Williams attended Ohio State University, Columbus, and Wilmington College, Wilmington. Before his enlistment in the Air Corps, he was a teacher at Madison Township school. He received his commission last April and is now stationed at the San Angelo Army Air Field, San Angelo, Texas.

The young couple are now living at 19 North Oakes Street, San Angelo, Texas.

Summers Hold Family Picnic At Cottage

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Summers, Sr., entertained with a picnic, Sunday, at their cottage at Rock Mills, at which time the guests of honor were Pvt. and Mrs. W. E. Summers, Jr., who are here on furlough from Camp Ralike, California, whose marriage was recently announced.

The guests assembled at noon, for the delicious meal, which was served picnic fashion, with the guests waiting upon themselves. The meal was eaten under the trees near the summer cottage, with much amusement and hilarity which is usually present at these family gatherings.

The afternoon was spent in exploring the grounds around the cottage and visiting with the honor guests.

Those present for this most delightful day were Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Summers and son, Hal, Pvt. and Mrs. W. E. Summer, Jr., of near Orange, California, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Tooker and son, Randy, of Columbus, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Hidy and son, Alfred.

A breezy ensemble for light-hearted summer days. Blouse, skirt, bra and shorts are all included in Anne Adams Pattern 4384. Note how charmingly young are the square neck, and slim waist. Easy to make, too! Choose a gay peasant print.

Pattern 4384 is available in junior miss sizes 11, 13, 15 and 17. Size 13, dress, takes 2-7-8 yards 35-inch fabric; bra, 7-8 yard; and shorts, 1 yard 35-inch fabric.

Send SIXTEEN CENTS in coins for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly: SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER.

TEN CENTS more brings you our new Summer Pattern Book with cool, smart styles for work and play.

Trio of Veteran Pitchers Puts Pirates Up in Race

By SID FEDER (By The Associated Press) It was only a question of time until Frank Frisch came up with something that would at least give the boss-laugh to the old gag that baseball is a young man's game. Now that he's found it, he has his Pittsburgh Pirates parading up the trail.

Including yesterday's twin win over the Brooklyn Dodgers—the Pirates have put together four victories in a row and ten out of 13, not counting one time, since the All-Star fuss, and they are close enough to second place in the National League to reach over and give the bums a G. I. haircut.

Inasmuch as the Pirates have no season-long regular batting .300 and the club itself sports a puny par of .256 for the year up to now—it is obvious the boost of the Bucs lately lies in the elbowing forces Frisch has been rejuv-

NEW YORK, July 26—(P)—Because Denny Shea of the football Dodgers popped off the other day about "town team" grid outfits that didn't intend to play full time this fall, the Philadelphia-Pittsburgh combination is protesting to Commissioner Elmer Layden. . . in baseball this would be the cue for a howl of "cry babies," but then no baseball clubs would pass up such a chance to start a hot feud. . . the Phil-Pitts have a ready-made reply, they'll use able bodied citizens who can hold down a tough job and play football too, not 4-F's who have to be wheeled on to the field.

Monday Matinee Pitcher Elmer Riddle of the Reds is in his fifth season of big league baseball and hasn't made an error yet. . . from recent reports, it appears that football writers next fall will have to copy their leads from the business notices, like: "Seven marines from Minnesota and four Iowa sailors, trading under the name of Northwestern University," etc. . . Joe Neville, the Delaware, O., harness racing maestro, is trying to promote a match race between pacers Adios and Senator Abbe. . . catcher Al Lopez calls Rip Sewell's blooper pitch the "ephus" ball. . . "ephus doesn't mean anything," Lopez explains, "but neither does the pitch."

AA Leaders Beaten Twice By Red Birds

(By The Associated Press) The Columbus Red Birds, whose July drive up the American Association ladder stalled as soon as they turned to the road last week, are climbing again.

Now in third place, they moved within two and a half games of first place Milwaukee yesterday by tripping the league leaders twice, 2-1 and 5-2. They also advanced within a game of second place Indianapolis, which could get no better than a split with St. Paul. Indianapolis won the first game 5-2 and St. Paul took the second 5-4.

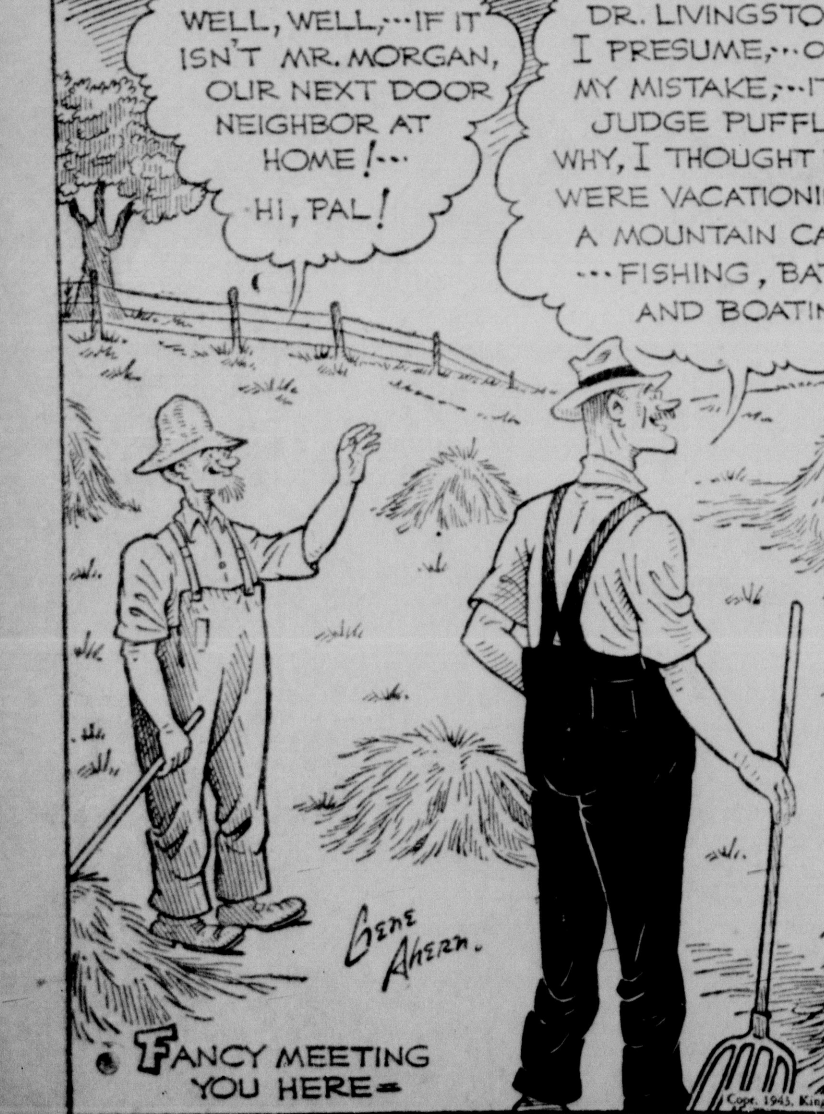

Last place Kansas City built up a three game winning streak by disposing of Toledo, 4-3 in the opener, but then lost, 4-2. Louisville won its first game with Minneapolis, 9-5 and saw the Millers grab the second, 3-2.

LONG SHOT GOES AFTER GOLF TITLE

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN CHICAGO, July 26—(P)—Blushing Buck White, unaccustomed to the glare of flash bulbs and the handclaps of well wishers, modestly went after the first tournament victory in his otherwise uneventful golf career today—the Tam O'Shanter All American Open Championship.

White, a 32-year-old ex-caddy, who now is pro at Greenwood, Miss., seldom has finished in the money of the cash circuit, but today he meets Jug McSpaden of Philadelphia, a seasoned follower of the Rainbow Trail, in an 18-hole playoff for the $2,000 first prize and the title which goes with the game's richest tournament. The loser gets a runner up award of $1,400.

McSpaden, winner of the Cincinnati Open in 1939 and the Miami Open last winter, tied with White at the end of their 72 holes yesterday with an aggregate of 282, after both had fired 71's one under par.

Chick Harbert, Battle Creek, Mich., aviation cadet, took a brief lead with three straight birdies, but blew it with a pair of boggies to tie Byron Nelson of Toledo, Ohio, for third place, with 283. Harbert posted a par 72 while Nelson rounded out a 68 with a four under par 32 on the back nine.

COON DOG TRIALS HERE EXCEED EXPECTATIONS

The newly formed Fayette County Coon Hunters' Association today had $105.83 more to add to its fund for restocking the county with raccoons as the result of its first big venture—the field trials held Sunday on the Johnson and Kyle farms about one-half mile north of Buena Vista, according to figures given out by the secretary, Harry Speakman.

The event turned out to be far bigger, in every way, than had been anticipated. The 71 dogs entered were about a third more than had been expected and the crowd of more than 250 was twice as large.

The dogs were cast from along the first crossroads north of the village and the finish was made in the woods along the north bank of Rattlesnake Creek.

Dayton coon hunters' dogs carried off the honors but that did not dim the jubilation of the Fayette countians although they might have been a bit disappointed.

The top award of the trials, described as the "final tree," was won by Blue Cry, owned by Saylor and Darbyshire of Dayton and second honors, tagged the "final line," went to Black Dan, owned by Russell and Birchfield also of Dayton. The dog winning the "final tree," it was explained, was the first to "tree" the raccoon and the winner of the "final line" was the dog first to cross the imaginary line into the "tree" area. The winner of the "final tree" took down $24.85 which was 35 percent of the $71 total entry fees and the winner of the "final line" got $17.75, which was 25 percent of the entry fees. Under the field trial plan, 60 percent of the entry fees was set aside for prize money and 40 percent for the association.

The trials started at 1 P. M. and continued throughout the afternoon with seven heats until 6 P. M.

Many women and children took advantage of the opportunity to see the family dogs run and spend an afternoon in the outing.

The association added the money from the concessions, soft drinks and sandwiches, to its share of the entry fees.

Double Bill Is Split by Reds Sunday

CINCINNATI, July 26—(P)—The Cincinnati Reds and the Philadelphia Phils play the finale of their four-game series this morning in a "swing shift" contest starting at 11 o'clock.

The Reds hold the edge for this series winning two and losing one. Ray Starr, who lasted but two heats against the Phils Saturday, will do the hurling for the Redlegs while Lefty Jack Kraus or Anton Karl will oppose him.

The two teams split yesterday's double header, the Cincinnati team winning the opener 7 to 3 but losing the nightcap 3 to 1. Elmer Riddle went the route in the first game for his thirteenth victory of the season despite a shaky first inning in which the Phils pounded out all of their runs.

Rough treatment was handed the Reds by Richard (Kewpie) Barrett in the nightcap who dolled out seven well-scattered hits. The Phils climbed on Ed Heusser for nine hits—three of them doubles.

AMERICAN HEROES

BY LEFF

Three Japs killed with one bullet was the score of Marine Pfc. Nicholas Silos while defending a small village somewhere in the South Pacific. Silos dropped the trio as they approached Indian file and then barged two more before the swarming little men's rifle fire put him out of commission and he had to be hospitalized. Our boys are making the best use of the ammunition which you help buy when you invest in War Bonds. Help pass them on to him.

DEMOCRACY VANISHING IN PROFESSOR'S OPINION

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP)—Because Americans pass the buck, they are losing democracy, in the opinion of Prof. M. E. John, at Pennsylvania State College.

"We have become too complacent," he said. "We have fallen into the attitude of letting the other fellow do it rather than tackling our problems ourselves."

Centralization in local and national government is a result of our complacency, he asserts.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Beans

So long as a soldier can eat and think up disparaging names for his equipment the Army will do all right. Food is either "beans," or "chow."

"Chow" may consist of a well cooked meal or if circumstances demand our fighting men have learned to subsist on "Ration K," the concentrated food that all of them carry into battle.

With millions of men and women in the services it will require a lot of War Bond buying on our part to keep them happy.

Fairground Buzzes With Once-a-Year Activities

BIG SHOW OPENS TUESDAY NIGHT FOR FIVE DAYS

Exhibits, Livestock, Horses And Carnival Attractions Pouring Through Gates

It's Fair Week again in Fayette County!

Out on the Fairgrounds at the western limits of Washington C. H. the always amazing transformation is well under way, although the Fair itself will not be formally inaugurated until Tuesday night when the Boone County Jamboree, of WLW radio fame, is presented.

Tents are springing up as if by magic all over the grounds which only a few days ago were deserted and overgrown with tall and raggedy weed patches.

There are the old and familiar noises. The shouting of men and loud voices of women in that sprawling little tent and wagon town mingled with the barking of dogs and the shrill yelling of the vagabond children as city youngsters from the nearby neighborhoods come out to satisfy their curiosity and to play a bit with the strange newcomers.

All day Sunday there was a steady stream of assorted trucks and cars, most of them the worse for wear and showing the hard life they lead, too, kept coming and going through the main gate. And steadily the motley gathering of tents, trucks and house-trailers grew. It was a colorful and picturesque panorama and it kept changing by the minute.

Back on the west end of the grounds, back behind the grandstand and among the barns, all was hustle and bustle, with horses arriving in huge vans and small trailers drawn by automobiles. Men of all ages and descriptions scurried here and there among the barns. Horses' heads stuck out of the tiny square windows in long lines of some as they looked over their new surroundings. Canopies decorated many of the barns and the lanes between them and the aisles inside were rapidly being cluttered in what to the uninitiated might think was a disorderly array of tack trunks, race sulkies and harness. All about men went with an unusually quickened pace from barn to barn. Outside under the trees, they walked in circles with horses, giving them their daily exercise. For those whose work was in a temporary lull, there was that brief spell for a nap on the ground or gossip in groups sprawled on bales of hay or straw. And, there was plenty of arguments about how fast their charges would go, come the last four days of the week and the racing. One statement, however, went without dispute—that the horses inside the barns were far and away the best, taken as a whole, that ever had set foot on the Fairground in its more than half a century of existence.

Over "on the hill" where the livestock show has been held for years, big tents were rising from the ground and the rattle of hammers and saws and slapping of boards meant that things were being put in readiness for the sheep, hogs and cattle that would start rolling in from the farms late Monday evening and early Tuesday.

Trucks were dashing over the driveways bringing in exhibits of everything from a few pieces of farm equipment to dainty doilies, flowers to fat ears of corn, furnishings for the display booths of the city's merchants to a big airplane engine, the parts for which were made in the community's biggest war industry.

Everywhere, were members of the Fair Board, all busy business men from the city and the farms, who were starting a week of the most nerve-racking work of the year. Their own affairs put in shape, they planned to spend the week at the Fairground, from early morning until late at night, to mark up another success for the county's annual agricultural and entertainment extravaganza.

Eleven head of hogs disappeared from the Ed Jones farm near the Children's Home in Clinton County, recently, and officers are investigating.

The hogs were nearly all black and weighed around 100 pounds each.

MRS. EISENBREY DIES IN CRASH OF MOTORCYCLE

Howard Eisenbrey, Husband, Is Injured Seriously Near New Orleans

Mrs. Howard Eisenbrey, formerly employed at the Farm Bureau office here, was fatally injured and her husband, former member of the Washington C. H. Fire Department before being inducted into the armed service, was injured seriously in a motorcycle crash in or near New Orleans, presumably Sunday night.

Word of Mrs. Eisenbrey's death was telephoned to her sister, Miss Martha Carter, also employed at the Farm Bureau office, late Monday afternoon.

Details were lacking, but one report stated that the Eisenbrey motorcycle and another motorcycle collided.

Eisenbrey is stationed at Camp Ponchartraine, near New Orleans, and Mrs. Eisenbrey had been with him a short time.

Mrs. Eisenbrey was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Coit Carter, of Brown's Chapel, and in addition to her sister, Martha, of this city, is survived by one brother, Emerson, of Ross County.

Eisenbrey is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Eisenbrey, of Second Street, Chillicothe.

Funeral plans for Mrs. Eisenbrey have not been announced.

JUVENILE DELINQUENCY IS BLAMED ON PARENTS BY CHILD PSYCHOLOGIST

versity branch office of the State Bureau of Juvenile Research.

And during that period he has never recommended that a boy or girl be sent to the Boys' Industrial School near Lancaster or the Girls' Industrial School near Delaware.

Reporting on his studies, he offered several suggestions for parents.

Children, he said, should be limited in the free money they receive.

"I favor," he continued, "allowances for children if the payments are in terms of work done and not automatic financial hand-outs. When a child on an allowance runs out of money, his parents should refuse him cash until the regular payment date. The plan breaks down if the money is advanced."

Taking the position that care of children is a woman's first obligation, Dr. Newburger said mothers should not work if they can't make enough money to provide proper care for their offspring, because "children never should be permitted to run wild."

Don't be arbitrary with children, is another point in Dr. Newburger's list of suggestions. "We should talk over problems with children and always give a reason for criticizing them," he said.

How about use of the rod? "Paddling at times has its place," he said, "but we never should beat up a child. When my daughter pulls the dog's hair, I pull hers. When she runs into the street, I paddle her and tell her why. . . . A child should be punished only if such treatment helps him in the future."

MONEY POWERS SCORED BY WALLACE—SPEECH IS POOH-POOHED BY GOP

Roosevelt for what he has done for them with American dollars. Americans are getting a bit weary of all the nice things we do for others and are wondering when we are to start looking after American interests for a change."

Wallace said in his speech that on a recent trip to South America he found that "the lowliest peon looked on President Roosevelt as the symbol of his dearest aspirations in the peace to come."

Wallace's speech reportedly was one of a series he plans to make in the near future, revolving around the post war plans he and others in the administration have espoused. Intimates said the vice president may sound a new challenge on the isolationism issue in a speech tentatively scheduled for Chicago this fall, and he later may visit the west coast and the south.

THE OLD HOME TOWN

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MRS. OLINGER

Largely attended funeral services for Mrs. Samantha J. Olinger were held at Mount Olive Methodist Church, on the CCC highway west of this city, Saturday at 2 p. m. in charge of Rev. Charles P. Taylor, pastor of the church.

Rev. Taylor read a memoir and the hymn "Crossing the Bar." Rev. Taylor spoke of the long Christian life of Mrs. Olinger and the fact that she was the oldest member of Mt. Olive Church.

Mrs. Al Rumans and Miss Jane Fultz sang the hymns "Home of the Soul," "Rock of Ages" and "When They Ring Those Golden Bells," with Miss Cora Plymire at the piano.

There were many lovely floral gifts and these were cared for by Mrs. Carolyn Carr, Mrs. Dorothy Miller, Mrs. Mina Newman, Miss Virginia Carr and Miss Margaret Haines.

Burial was made in the family lot in the Bush Cemetery, under direction of the Hook Funeral Home.

The pallbearers were: Paul Smith, Henry Engle, Vernon Bush, James and Wesley Wright and Luther Goodson.

FREDERICK L. OBBE CLAIMED BY DEATH

Former Teacher Here Dies of Heart Attack

Frederick Latimer Obbe, 31, formerly teacher of speech and dramatics of the Washington C. H. High School for three years, as well as librarian of the school, died suddenly of a heart attack Saturday night at 7 P. M., at his home on Winton Road, Finneytown, a suburb of Cincinnati.

Leaving this city in 1941, he went to Cincinnati to take up work with the American Book Company.

He established the news bureau of the Washington C. H. High School, and was active in various organizations while in this city.

During the last year he had been principal of one of the schools in Cincinnati.

He is survived by his widow, Thelma, and two children, Larry, 5 and Kathleen, 2.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2 P. M. at the Hodapp Funeral Home, 6041 Hamilton Avenue and burial made in the Pennsville, Ohio, cemetery.

MANY GUESTS FOR ROTARIANS MEETING

Woman Speaker from German Concentration Camp

Because of the public interest in the talk to be given before the Washington Rotary Club at its luncheon, Tuesday noon, at the County Club by Mrs. Ebert, formerly held as a prisoner in a German concentration camp, many wives and other guests of Rotarians are expected to attend.

Mrs. Ebert is being brought to this city by Dr. H. E. Boucher, a prominent Columbus surgeon, who has been interested in her case. She is reported to be the wife of a German veteran officer of the first World War who, because of his opposition to the Nazi regime, was placed in a concentration camp with his family.

Every enlisted Navy man has 13 buttons on his trousers, one for each of the original colonies.

MERCURY CLIMBS TO 92 ON SUNDAY

Temperature Very Similar to Year Ago

With an official registration of 92 degrees, Sunday afternoon took its place as one of the hottest of the season, although the peak during June was 96 degrees.

After reaching the peak, the mercury skidded down to 68 during the night and was 76 at 8 A. M. Monday.

The temperature is running about the same as it was a year ago when 91 and 68 were the extremes for the day.

IDENTIFIES BURGLAR HELD IN CHILLICOTHE

Mrs. George Mytinger, of Chillicothe, formerly of this city, has identified Robert McAfee, 36, negro, as the burglar who visited the Mytinger home recently and stole a pocket book containing $3.60.

Mrs. Mytinger was aroused at 2:30 A. M. by the burglar in an adjacent room, and when she asked him what he wanted he fled, but not before she obtained a good look at the intruder.

The same man stole $35 from another house and entered a third house before he was arrested.

Ebenhack, a farmer, says he has been forced to take their two-year old son to the home of his mother for proper care.
